ANTI-SUFFRAGE NOTES

Government is protection. The whole science of government is the science of protecting life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness, of protecting our person, our property, our homes, our wives and our children, against foreign aggression, against civil dissension, against mobs and riots.

In the divine distribution of powers, the duty and the right of protection rests with the male. It is so throughout nature. It is so with men, and I, for one, will never consent to part with the divine right of protecting my wife, my daughter, the women whom I love and the women whom I respect, exercising the birthright of man, and place that high duty in the weak and nerveless hands of those designed by God to be protected rather than to engage in the stern warfare of government. The true government is in the family. The true throne is in the household. The highest exercise of power is that which forms the conscience, influences the will, controls the impulses of men, and there today woman is supreme and woman rules the world. The time will never come when this line of demarcation between the functions of the two sexes will be broken down. I believe it to be false philosophy; I believe that it is an attempt to turn backward upon the line of social development, and that if the step ever be taken, we go centuries backward on the march towards a higher, a nobler and a purer civilization, which must be found not in the confusion, but in the higher differentiation of the sexes.

ELIHU ROOT

An attempt was made in the suffrage notes of last week to discredit the statement attributed to Col. Irish that eighty per cent of the women of voting age in California had failed to register. If, as is most likely, he referred to the election of November, 1912, the statement would not have been far from correct; and, if he had said that eighty per cent did not vote, he would have been substantially correct. The record, which anyone can get at the office of the Secretary of State at Sacramento, California, shows that of the men of legal age, 93 per cent registered and only 27 per cent of the women; 68 per cent of men and women combined voted at that election. Now if we allow that 68 per cent of the women who registered voted, which is probably too high an estimate, we find that only 18 per cent of all the women of the state of legal age voted. But, some one will say, that was in 1912. How about 1914? That the leopard is not likely to change his spots much in two years may be inferred from the following facts. At a local option election in San Francisco near the end of 1912, about one in eight of the women who were interested enough to register voted, which may explain the large number of saloons, said to be 3500, now in that city, while Boston, one-third larger and no woman suffrage, has about 700. At a city election in the former city in November, 1913, one year later, about 16 per cent of the women voted. Of an important election in Los Angeles, November, 1913, the Los Angeles Times says: "The vote of the women was disappointing. In some precincts the number was negligible, and in others hardly one-third of the whole number voted, in spite of a very active campaign on the part of the suffragists." Of the State election of November, 1914, the writer has no official figures, but as state prohibition, an eight-hour law, the abatement of houses of prostitution, abolition of prize-fighting, a minimum wage for women, one day in seven for rest, were all defeated by large majorities, it would not seem complimentary to the women to assume that the number voting was very much larger, relatively to the non-voters, than in 1912, and the writer will add, though from another state, as showing that there is no consuming interest among the women to vote, that at an election in Chicago in February, 1914, 9 per cent of eligible women voted at the primaries, and about 25 per cent at the election; 50 per cent of the men voted at this election. The time, in which the good things promised when women vote, will come, seems to be getting farther and farther away. Mrs. Catt is reported to have said that it might take a century for voting women to do away with a certain great evil. This reminds me of a reply made by the brilliant Englishman Sheridan, to an angry creditor who pursued him to his own door and demanded that he name the day on which he would pay a debt long overdue. "I shall be glad to do so," said Sheridan, "the day after the judgment day." The main object of voting is to register the will of the majority of those most concerned, and any propaganda that, if successful, would defeat this will, is inimical to our form of government. Shall the 60,000 women who are members of the Woman's Suffrage Associations in Massachusetts thrust this unwelcome burden of the ballot upon more than one million who do not want it? This is the main question after all.

McDOUGALL'S MUSINGS

A Round-About Paper

Men like Morgan and Rockefeller understand that the loan given to the Allies is just as much for the advantage of the lender as the borrower. The ordinary man in the street is apt to imagine that we have done a charitable deed in giving the Allies money at 5 per cent.

Suppose that, instead of asking a loan from us, England and France, who have many millions of dollars invested in this country, had put the shares of American stock they held on the market; what a picnic there would have been in Wall Street! It may be that, if the war goes on for another year, instead of borrowing money here, the Allies may sell their American shares of stock and use the proceeds to buy British consols to keep the war going.

The Boston Globe had an editorial last week, the heading of which was, "England goes back to protection after sixty years of free trade." The fact is that England is not tired of free trade and the sixty years of growth in every way that it has given her. But she has to meet the cost of a terrible war, and every man and woman in Ireland, Scotland and England will have to pay more for the articles taxed. Tea and sugar and tobacco will be dearer. The income tax has been extended to incomes of less than a thousand dollars a year, and so on. The tariff reformers who have been for years agitating for what they call tariff reform, asking for a tax on wheat, beef, and all foodstuffs imported, are not pleased with Mr. McKenna's budget. These tariff reformers are Tories and say that wheat and all foodstuffs taxed would be cheaper as they are Tories who, like our good Home Market Club friends, never forget anything and never learn anything. The majority of people in England are wise enough to know that a duty on wheat or beef just means dearer beef and dearer wheat.

Mr. Asquith does not like the conscription idea and says, and I think that he is right in what he says, that as the war goes on, the country begins to see that men are needed, and that Lord Kitchener is getting recruits faster than he can get munitions of war.

The long evenings are with us again. Might I suggest that one evening a week be used in getting to know the geography of the places where the trade of war is now carried on. The study of the political, religious, and physical aspects of the different countries would let us know that Andover, Lawrence and Boston are not the only places in the world.

Boston is baseball mad, Europe is war mad, Andover is politically mad. "Tis a mad world, my masters."

"What fools these mortals be."

To a Star

There are six candidates for governor of Massachusetts, and all are for votes for women. Six wagons hitched to a star!—Springfield Republican.

Pretty Soon

President Wilson's declaration in favor of giving the ballot to women adds incalculably to the steadily growing strength of the woman suffrage cause. The question is no longer "Shall women vote?" but "When will they vote?"—Providence Journal.

The Right to Vote

Every little while some anti-suffragist discovers the, to him, brand new argument that voting is not a natural, inherent right, but merely a privilege, and its granting is solely a question of expediency. It may be granted or denied by those to whom has been delegated power in the matter, etc., etc. All of which has been known since governments were first established. Everybody knows that in the beginning only kings had a right to rule. They ruled by divine right. But with the drift of time the nobles became presuming and insisted that they had a right to have something to say regarding their own and the general welfare. After fussing and fighting they were given the right to their say, which was equivalent to getting the vote. Then the big land-owners and men of prominence fussed and fought till they were given this right. Then rather common sorts of men began to fuss because they couldn't vote, and in a piecemeal sort of way the vote was given them, but not without a good deal of fussing and fighting. Now all the native men of America of mature age, black and white, except idiots and criminals, have the right—or privilege, if that sounds any better—not only to vote, but to keep the women from voting if they think it would be "inexpedient" to let the women have the ballot. Let it then be understood for all time that nobody except kings ever possessed the divine right to vote, and maybe some day they will conclude to take the privilege away from everybody else. But in the meanwhile we cannot do better than to remember the words of Henry George: "The natural right of a woman to vote is just the same as that of a man and rests upon the same grounds; as she is expected to obey the laws, she ought to have a voice in making them."—Editorial, Boston Traveller, Oct. 1.

The women have worked hard and they are going to work harder, but it is unfortunate that they have to work at all. The whole agitation seems so needless, so wasteful of effort, such a poor reflection on mankind.

It would seem that most of the opposition to woman suffrage comes from innate conservatism, fear of a change. If we allowed that conservatism to rule our lives we would be still in the Stone Age.

The question of the right of women to vote has nothing whatever to do with how the women will vote after they get the ballot.

It has nothing to do with the intelligence of their vote.

It has nothing to do with their "voting right." Voting right means nothing except voting the way the person interested wishes.

It has nothing to do with any or all these imaginary results and speculative evils.

It is not a question whether women want the vote. Of course many women will not care to vote. Many slaves do not want their freedom. Woman is naturally a conservative. She has been kept back. There are many men who do not vote. Compare the male population of Boston with the number of voters at the last State election. Only half the men in the city voted. That certain women do not want to vote is no reason why thousands of women who do want to vote should not be allowed the ballot.

The question of woman's suffrage rests on justice. We pose as a democracy. To exclude one-half, and in many respects a finer half, of our population merely on the physical question of sex, is unjust. If women are to be bound by the laws of the country they should be allowed to shape those laws.

If men will think of woman's suffrage as a question of simple justice and stop worrying how they think it might affect their own personal viewpoint and aspirations—which in any big question they should entirely ignore—then there would be no question about the result of the vote on the question in Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts this autumn. Many men will think so.—Editorial, Boston Sunday Globe, Oct. 10.

PARK SQUARE

"Twin Beds" is proving as rollicking a laugh festival as ever. Unabated in popularity as in mirth-provoking qualities, this antic story of the calamities of six people assorted in couples and housed on three floors of a large apartment building such as are common in New York grapple with a fate never intended for them, and the method through which they finally obtain natural peace and quiet in the home makes a comedy inculcably amusing.

Two of its characters alone would justify its popular success—though the others are only barely second: the Signora Monti an able-bodied Amazon who found a fat little Italian tenor warbling in a cabaret in Brooklyn, at $18 a week, married him, and then elevated him to the temperamental group of $2000-per-nighters at the Metropolitan, and even thereafter camped on his trail to keep him out of jail for damaging affections; and little Blanche Hawkins, newly married to her Harry, domestic and none too sociable, who found that Blanche's propensity for picking up stray acquaintances in the elevator of the big apartment house which the Hawkinses, the Montis, and the Larkins all lived in, was quite enough to drive a sane man mad.

The regular matinees are given on Wednesdays and Saturdays. All mail orders are promptly and carefully attended to.

MAJESTIC

At the end of its thirtieth consecutive week, after having played no less than three hundred and sixty times to as many separate and distinct audiences, "The Birth of a Nation" will terminate its Boston engagement on Saturday, October 30. "The Birth of a Nation" has been called "the eighth wonder of the world," and certainly, in point of theatrical longevity, the term is well deserved, here in Boston. When it is considered that years of study and months of training and half a million dollars in cash were devoted to the preparation of this, the Nation's life-story, the reward was only just, considering the risks and sacrifices involved.

SHUBERT

The final week of "Experience" at the Shubert theatre, beginning Monday, October 18, is announced by a regretful management, and this celebrated morality play will have to leave Boston at the height of its extraordinary success on Saturday night, October 23.

The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given for the remainder of the engagement.

WILBUR

After one whole year in London and all last season in New York, Cyril Harcourt's comedy success, "A Pair of Silk Stockings," has been presented by Mr. Winthrop Ames at the Wilbur Theatre, Boston, where it met with instant favor.

Sam Sothern is a wholly delightful comedian in the role of Sam Thornhill; Eva Leonard-Boyne is an attractive Molly Thornhill; Alison Skipworth gives a splendid performance of Lady Gower. Sybil Carlisle is Irene Maitland, in love with the Captain and therefore a trifle cattish. Captain Bagnal is played well by P. Clayton Greene, and Wallace Erskine is a dutifully devoted husband to Lady Gower. A particularly good bit of work is done by Theodore Duggie as the tramp. The rest of the cast is well-balanced.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE

Namely a certain lot of land, with the buildings thereon situated in that part of said Andover called Ballard Vale, on the westerly side of Lowell Street, and containing about two thousand square feet, being the same now and heretofore occupied by me as my home and the same premises conveyed to me by Patrick Devaney by deed dated May 20, 1874, recorded with Essex North Dist. Deeds Book 28 Page 416. Said North Dist. Deeds Book 28 Page 416. Said premises will be sold subject to two prior mortgages, all unpaid taxes or assessments thereon. Terms of sale: The purchaser will be required to pay one hundred dollars at the time and place of sale, the balance of the purchase money to be paid within ten days thereafter.

PLYMOUTH

"Back Home" at the Plymouth theatre, Boston, has proved all its sponsors claimed for it and more. Irving Cobb's delightful stories of Judge Priest provided a prolific fund of material teeming with drama and humor, and the flavor has been faithfully preserved by the playwright. This central figure of the play is one of the most delectable of characters, quaint and lovable, with the homeliest of virtues, and it bids fair to be one of the most admired figures of the stage, ranking with those of Col. Mulberry Sellers, Pudd'nhead Wilson, Josh Whitcomb and the several that James A. Herne made famous. Willis P. Sweatman, the most popular delineator of negro characters on the American stage, has in this play another role that will add one more to his already long list of characters made notable. There is every reason to believe that "Back Home" is destined for a long and prosperous run. The matinees at this theatre are given on Thursdays and Saturdays. Out-of-town patrons are assured that all mail orders will receive careful attention.

HOLLIS STREET

"Nobody Home", the fascinating musical comedy which opened the theatrical season in Boston, will start its third month at the popular Hollis Street theatre next Monday evening. The cast is headed by the English comedian, Lawrence Grossmith, who has a fund of humor all his own. Miss Adele Rowland, piquant and delightfully attractive, displays handsome costumes with grace and distinction.

One of the attractions at the Hollis Street theatre is the augmented orchestra of twenty men gathered from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. For the benefit of out-of-town patrons the management wishes to announce that the matinee performance is over at 4.40 and the evening performance at 10.40.

TOY THEATRE

"Independent Means", a dramatic comedy by the brilliant Stanley Houghton, served as the vehicle for the newly-formed Copley Players upon the inauguration of their season at the Toy theatre last Tuesday evening. The play was received with approbation by a very fashionable audience.

The drama, the third which the late Stanley Houghton wrote, was first brought out by The Horniman Players at the Gaiety theatre, Manchester, England, late in August, 1909, and is said to have given Miss Horniman her first big financial success. The piece ran five and a half weeks in repertory. The current production is the first which has been presented in America, with the exception of that made a few years ago by Donald Robertson in Chicago.

To those who admire boisterous farce, "Independent Means" will not appeal. It is a fine-grained comedy in the spirit of the newer British playwrights. The play will continue at the Toy theatre for an indefinite run. The evening performances commence at 8.30, and matinees are given on Thursday and Saturday at 2.15. The Toy is one of the most accessible theatres in Boston. One line of electric cars runs directly past the door on Dartmouth street, while it is but a minute's walk from the door of the theatre to the Boylston street subway and the surface cars on Huntington avenue.

I. O. G. T. Notes

Abbott Village lodge held a very successful meeting Monday evening in the village hall at which three candidates were initiated. After the routine business the members were entertained by Rev. F. A. Wilson with an illustrated lecture entitled "The Drunkard's Reform." Before and after the lecture the Free Church children's choir sang. The entertainment was highly appreciated by the members.

SOCCER

Andover 1, Beverly 1

Andover United and the U. S. M. A. A. team of Beverly shared the points in a Lawrence, Lowell and District League game in the cricket field last Saturday afternoon, when after a fast game, the score stood one goal each.

The weather was ideal and there was a large gathering of fans. A handsome pennant was raised by the Andover club, the flag being emblematic of the league championship held by the Andover United.

Neither team played its best football, the champions especially failing to show their best form except for a period near the opening of the second half. During the first half Beverly carried the game into the home end, where the United defense was unable to keep the visitors from getting into position for scoring. The Beverly forwards, however, could not finish, and although the backs were outplayed on several occasions, the shooting was erratic. Kidd, the home goal-keeper, getting little to do.

Croft saved his side in the second half many good shots, and several dangerous mistakes were cleared by him in masterly fashion. The result was satisfactory to the many non-partisan spectators present, while the home supporters could not grudge the visitors the point considering the display of the champions.

Dougherty scored for the locals in the first half, although both teams missed several opportunities. Beverly evened up in the second half through A. Black. Joe Black narrowly missed putting over the winning goal for Andover, the ball hitting the crossbar, with Croft completely beaten. Seven of the visitors were former Andover players.

The summary:

Andover—Kidd; Jackson and Higginbotham; Coleman, Joe Black, Renzie; Gilmarin, Deyermund, Cairnie, Dougherty, Caldwell.

Beverly—Croft; McCauley, W. Black; Churchley, Haddon, Dakers; Gordon, McCulloch, A. W. Black, Lowe, Skea.

Score: Andover 1, Beverly 1. Goals, Dougherty, A. Black. Referee, Thompson, Ritchie; linesmen, J. Gorrie, John Black; Time, 45-minute periods.

Miss Belle J. Keeler of Brookline, who is training the dancers for the Shakespeare Festival, is already well known to Andover by her classes. She will herself dance the Gypsy Dance in the Masque of the Tutored Bear.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Volume 29 of the Townsman begins with next week's issue.

For 28 years the Townsman has been a weekly visitor to practically every home in Andover. In this time it has been enlarged once, and during this period it has added many features to keep it as nearly as possible a helper of all that is best in Andover.

For the past two years it has been increasingly evident that more space must be provided for the fuller reports of Andover happenings which Andover readers seemed to desire.

Next week's issue will be an answer to that desire in the shape of a still larger Townsman, to include 8 pages of 7 columns each, containing new departments and an improved makeup, which we hope to make very attractive to Townsman readers.

We take pleasure in expressing our appreciation of the confidence and support of the Andover Public which make this change necessary.

A slight fire in the office of the Tyer Rubber Company last Saturday evening about 7.30 o'clock, called the entire department to the scene, the alarm being sounded on Box 52. #### Presentation to Mrs. Buchan

Gen. Wm. F. Bartlett Corps, 127, held a regular meeting in G. A. R. hall Tuesday evening, with a good attendance. For the good of the order, the president, Mrs. Buchan, gave an interesting account of her trip to Washington.

At the close of the meeting, much to her surprise, Mrs. Buchan was escorted to the station of the vice-president, Mrs. Valentine, who in a few well-chosen words, congratulated Mrs. Buchan upon the honor which had come to her and to the Corps through her, in being elected junior vice-president of the Essex County Association, and in behalf of the members of the Corps, presented her with a cut glass bowl and silver berry spoon, as a token of their appreciation of her untiring work and loyal devotion to the Corps.

Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Grange News

The Grange meeting on Tuesday evening was observed as Columbus Night. The meeting was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Boutwell. The entertainment was interesting. Views were shown of Columbus preparing to sail, his fleet, and the landing. The last scene was the deathbed of Columbus. Rev. Newman Matthews gave a talk; he spoke of the courage of Columbus during the years he was trying to interest different people in his expedition. The Worthy Lecturer, Ira B. Hill, gave a talk on the order of the Knights of Columbus. The meeting closed with the singing of "America". At the close of the meeting a box supper was enjoyed, the men furnishing the supper.

Wednesday, October 20, the Andover Grange entertains Boxford Grange at Boxford. A barge will leave the Grange Hall at 7 o'clock, and Andover square at 7.15 o'clock.

October 26, Andover Grange will observe visitors' night, the entertainment being furnished by North Andover Grange.

The reading given by Miss Lucy Lee in the Grange Hall Friday, October 8, proved to be very interesting. A large audience was present and the sum of $52 was realized. This enables the Grange to give $75 to the Educational Aid Fund. Still more is needed to help the young people.

Fishing Trip

About thirty men attended the fishing trip held off Swampscott on Sunday. The journey to Swampscott was made in an auto-barge which left the square at six o'clock.

The party went to the fishing grounds aboard the "Letter D" with Captain Haley in charge. Very few fish were caught. The largest was a 24-pound pollock, pulled in by Walter Vogel of Lawrence, and he was awarded first prize. Second prize was divided between Bert Mears and Charles Hughes while Archie MacLaren took the booby. The trip was a very enjoyable one, and among those who went were Alexander Anderson, Howard Baker, William Baker, Andrew Batchelder, George Buchan, Edward Berry, John Campbell, John Carse, Joseph Connolly, Elmer Davis, John Elder, David Guthrie, Charles Hughes, John Hutton, Leon Germain, Ross Keogh, James Livingston, John Manning, Samuel Murray, Archie MacLaren, Bert Mears, William Mackenzie, John MacGrath, Joseph MacCarthy, Dennis MacCarthy, John Nicoll, Alexander Ness, James Spark, James Thompson, Walter Vogel, Eugene LeArcher and E. Zecchini.

Mothers' Club

Members and friends of the Andover Mothers' Club visited the Danvers State Hospital Wednesday afternoon. The party was conveyed by auto to and from the cars through the kindness of Dr. Kline, the superintendent.

Dr. Kline gave an interesting talk in a general way, of his work at the institution. He then introduced Dr. Patterson, a female physician, who talked of the mentally defective, and Miss Curtiss, who told of the social service work at the hospital—a service calculated to bring the community into closer touch with the hospital, and for its issue to prevent some of the causes of insanity. The fact that 50 per cent of the cases of insanity are preventable, makes this social service work of vital importance.

The party was then shown over the building. It has a charming situation and within all was neatness and order, reflecting credit upon those in charge. The superintendent believes in occupation, and while the room for work is limited, the exhibits in the Arts Craft room are beautiful in design and workmanship. These articles are sold and at Christmas times they have many purchasers.

The party returned to Andover at 7 o'clock, much pleased with their visit.

In "The Possibilities of Mud-Puddles" William S. Davis again shows his ability to find pictures in unusual and unlooked for places. The article has four illustrations that are up to the standard of this prolific worker.

Harold Loeb wants the stereoscope of our boyhood days revived, and bemoans the lack of supplies for this kind of work.

In the second instalment of "The Keys of Improved Chemical Excellence", Mr. Riley covers the proper use of good materials. These articles are worth careful study and the writer knows his subject thoroughly.

Our old and welcome friend, William Ludlum, Jr., has found the ideal mode of travel for the camera fiend. This latest "Side-Trip" is made on a bicycle. Some excellent suggestions are given in "The Making of Artistic Printed Borders", and the illustrations are really artistic.

There are several short articles, and the several departments make this a very interesting number.

A remarkable landscape is reproduced on Page 171. It is by H. C. Mann and is one of those pictures that smash the last line of defense held by those who claim the camera cannot create.

DUOFOLD is constructed on the same principle that common sense has approved for bed coverings, warm wool outside, soft cotton inside, ventilating air space between. DUOFOLD keeps you comfortable as well as warm, as free from wool chafing during the day as you are at night. Two light weight fabrics with air space between afford more warmth than one heavy weight fabric. All other underwear is made with the idea of giving warmth and nothing else. As a matter of fact, people can get warmth if wrapped in newspapers only, but newspapers would not permit proper "ventilation," "evaporating" and absorbing features which are necessary to health and life. DUOFOLD absorbs more readily and dries more easily than any other underwear.

Shakespeare in Modern Religion

Last Sunday morning at Christ church Rev. Charles W. Henry preached an eloquent discourse on the influence of Shakespeare on modern religious life.

Mr. Henry took for his text, "Search was made in the home of the books," Ezra VI:1, and said in part:

"There is often a reward in search. Even if we do not find what we seek, there comes illumination to the mind and to the spirit. In the Bible story, King Darius found the decree which ordered the building of the House of God at Jerusalem.

"This morning it is fitting for us, because we are making ready for the Shakespeare Festival in this 300th anniversary of the poet's death, to search in his books to find a message to modern religious life.

"Not all inspiration comes to us through living man. That is the greatest, the most potent, no doubt. It is often in books we feel our impulse touched, however. We open the pages and new horizons are seen. After all, the poets of the world arouse us to awakened life. Every preacher is not a poet, but every poet is apt to be a preacher; it is the poet above all, whose imagination seizes, like a master, upon our sensible impressions and quickens us 'to hold fit converse with the spiritual world, and with the generations of mankind'.

"There are some poets who, like Cowper or Coleridge or Wordsworth, or above all, Tennyson and Browning, who seem to be constantly taking note of the things of God in nature and in man.

"It appears that Shakespeare is cast in a somewhat different mould. He is constantly taking note of the things of men, not always in their relation to God, at all, though with a moral and ethical tenacity at the root, and with the most intent and scrutinizing and strongly picturing insight which has made his name live.

"Indeed, it was the things of men which held the stage in Shakespeare's day. Elizabethan London was taking advantage of their less fortunate neighbors and rivals in commerce. There was going on a great national and a great social and a great intellectual revolution. The first was finding its expression in the assertion of a new national independence. The second was to be seen in altering the main facts of English life. The third was shown in the results of the 'New Learning' in national life.

"In the church, things were much disorganized. Cecil, accompanying Queen Elizabeth in her tour of the country, wrote, 'Here be many slender ministers and much nakedness of religion.' We get our impression of bad moral conditions and looseness of conduct.

"Into this atmosphere came Shakespeare, changing from his Warwickshire home and his own unfortunate experience there, to the growing London life and its call to pleasure. He has left his record * * * and it has been called 'The observations of a man who was one of the greatest students of human nature that the world has ever seen.'

"Today, life is having somewhat the same color. Human nature in all the world is more or less exact. But in addition, today, are there not going on in the world-war, great national and social and intellectual revolutions, while the church is somewhat disorganized and God is put on one side too often? Therefore, when men bulk so large, can we not get a lesson from them, and for them, while they are so busy at their commerce here, so terrifying in this war in other places; so selfish in their grasp on wealth, so meagre in their search for righteousness; if we regard them in the light of this worship to the Most High Creator?

"Let Shakespeare, a leader in such observations, speak through his books. He brings to us a two-fold message—as a dramatist and as a poet.

"He has a message, because he is a dramatist, which is for modern religious life. It affects conduct. The stage with its action, its plan, its artistic effect, its climax of doing, is a place of conflict. An object is to be attained and the characters do their share, like the world, demanding as it is today, practical activity. His very statement is our own eye witness in life:—

'All the world's a stage
And all the men and women merely players;
They have their exits and their entrances.'

"So we play our part in activity, doing something, catching the cue, carrying on the scenes of ordinary life, with an object in view, in conflict.

"A call to action is the call of Shakespeare; a message of these and courage which will ring out helpfully in modern life, in this age, even as Shakespeare's age, somewhat religiously distraught.

"So we get a message from Shakespeare which religious life of today needs. Line up, in our good actions to use good motives. Let love and pity and loyalty be seen in the doing. Behold an end in life which makes all days count cheerfully. And yet it is not enough simply to put such thought, such feeling, such conviction into shape in life. As Shakespeare expressed his observation of humanity in terms of exquisite or lofty or compelling beauty, so let us make the good, the loving, the pitiful, an attraction, that men may be drawn to it by its very charm. To do 'a loving thing in an ugly or rough way makes the receiver think that it is not loving at all.' As Shakespeare attracts by his impression, diction, as well as his keen thought, so men will be attracted by our good deeds graciously done, and in the joy of the vision will follow after. Workmanship that satisfies is seen in Shakespeare's poetry. Workmanship that uplifts is to be striven for in Christian effort. Shakespeare's workmanship was inspired by men as he saw them. We, looking upon our fellowmen as sons of God, will model our workmanship upon such an exalted ideal."

An old farmer who had been to the metropolis was describing to his friends the splendor of the hotel at which he stayed.

"Everything was perfect," he said, "all but one thing. They kept the light burning all night in my bedroom, a thing I ain't used to."

"Well," said one wag, "why didn't you blow it out?"

"Blow it out," said the farmer. "How could I? The thing was inside a bottle!"

Investigations show that these insects, both as beetles and as larvae, consume enormous quantities of the gypsy moth larvae. At the present time it is regarded as the most important of the natural enemies of this widespread pest.

Punchard Defeats Methuen

On the morning of Columbus Day Punchard High defeated Methuen by the score of 24 to 0, on the local playground.

The contest, which was witnessed by a large holiday attendance, was marred somewhat by the frequent fumbling of both teams; Methuen, however, proved the worse offender in this respect.

The feature of the game was the work of Captain Lawson, the Punchard quarterback, who gave an excellent exhibition of circling his opponents' ends for substantial gains, as well as of successful dodging. He was obliged to retire in the last period on account of an old injury causing him trouble.

The Punchard team's first touchdown came as a result of a fumble by the Methuen team in their own territory, Lawson running 25 yards through the entire Methuen eleven for the touchdown.

Punchard scored again in the second period when Capt. Lawson, after catching a punt, ran 40 yards, and if his interference had done their duty he should have had a clear field. Kendall then circled the Methuen team for a 30-yard run, carrying the ball to the 4-yard line. On two plays Cronin carried the ball over.

Punchard added another score in the third period, Lawson going over after a 30-yard run.

At the opening of the fourth period Methuen made a first down on line plays. Punchard held and the Methuen boys were obliged to punt. Brown made 10 yards, after which Lawson on a trick play got away for a 20-yard gain. Capt. Lawson was injured and obliged to quit the game in favor of Webster. Brown got 10 yards more and Kendall got away for about 10 yards more, but fumbled on Methuen's 10-yard line. Methuen endeavored to punt into safer territory, but the kick was blocked and Boutwell fell on the ball in the rear of the goal for the last touchdown. Larkin's attempt at goal failed by a few inches.

The Methuen team made only three first downs during the contest, being kept on the defense most of the game, and when they had possession of the ball proved very weak on the offense except in the third period.

Last Friday afternoon at Derry, N. H., Punchard met Pinkerton Academy in a scoreless game, neither side scoring after forty minutes' playing. Pinkerton played Manchester High, which defeated Lawrence High School last year, early in the season and held them to a small score, and Punchard expected and got a stiff fight. The teams were very evenly matched and the contest was bitterly fought. Once Pinkerton had the ball one foot from a touchdown, but Punchard held and kept their opponents scoreless.

Former Andover Minister's Prose and Rhyme

The prose is the broadside article on the first page of The Congregationalist of September 23, entitled "One minister's start for the autumn," and with its signature of J. E. P. can be easily credited to the recent pastor of the West Parish. It is well worth reading for its characteristic originality and freshness, and one of his resolutions fits the laity as well as the ministry: "I am going to be out of bed at six o'clock every weekday that I may get at least one hour in before breakfast."

The rhyme appears on a West Newton church calendar, which happened to reach my desk at the same time as the Congregationalist article, and shows the same originality and point; it surely could have been written by no other than a native Briton! It gives in delightful brogue the familiar reasons for not attending church on account of the weather, and is worth reprinting in the Townsman.

SAFER PROTECTION FOR PASSENGERS

Demand in Latest United States Note to Germany

The United States, in a note dispatched to Germany on the case of the ship William F. Frye, asks that, if it is found necessary to destroy American ships carrying absolute contraband, passengers and crew be removed to a safer place than small boats.

The American government accepted the German suggestion in reply to the American proposal concerning a commission to fix damages for the Frye, agreeing to dispense with the umpire and leave the case to the two experts, one from each country.

In agreeing to submit to arbitration the interpretation of the treaty of 1828, to determine whether it gives Germany the right to destroy American ships in order to stop contraband traffic, the American government holds that not only must warning be given and passengers and crew saved, but that small boats are not considered a "place of safety" within the meaning of international law.

The United States has not insisted upon this heretofore with reference to Americans traveling on ships under a belligerent flag.

"If an immigrant is not fit to become a citizen he should not be allowed to come here," said Roosevelt. "If he is fit he should be given all the rights, to earn his own livelihood and to better himself, that any man can have."

The men's mission being conducted by the Dominican Fathers opened at 7:30 o'clock Sunday evening. Rev. Fr. Connolly recited the rosary and gave the instructions to St. Mary's, after which Rev. Fr. Healy delivered an eloquent sermon on "Christian Manhood," taking for his text the scripture passage, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"

Rev. Fr. R. A. Gleason of the local clergy gave the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. At the Immaculate Conception church, Rev. Fr. Lawlor performed the services, delivering a sermon on the same subject.

Tuesday's Knights of Columbus parade will ever be remembered as one of the grandest pageants ever held in this city. The tribute to the memory and in honor of Christopher Columbus, discoverer of America, was eminently a fitting one and surpassed all expectations in its magnitude and splendor.

More than 15,000 men from Massachusetts and New Hampshire cities and towns marched through the main streets of the city and there was nothing to mar the splendor of the occasion. Military, civic, social and religious societies combined to make up the marching throng and it was impressive to see these men of all nationalities and creeds all uniting to pay tribute to the man who made possible the wonderful United States.

In addition to being a tribute to Columbus, the parade was also a remarkable patriotic demonstration and showed how truly united are the peoples of all countries, under the one flag, the Stars and Stripes. At the conclusion of the parade Governor Walsh addressed an attentive throng of thousands from the bandstand in the Common. The governor was enthusiastically received and all through his talk the audience listened intently, deeply impressed with the eloquence and spirit of his address. Several times he was compelled to pause while his hearers cheered and applauded parts of his address. The grand ball conducted by Lawrence Council, Knights of Columbus, in the old armory on Amesbury street Tuesday night, concluded the ceremonies and was a glorious ending of a perfect day.

The annual harvest supper was conducted at St. Mark's M. E. church on Essex street Saturday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church. As in former years, the event was one of the big ones in the church calendar and was a recognized success, both financially and socially. It was a real harvest supper, with all the good things of the harvest abundantly represented, with garnishings of home manufacture that added much to the palatability of the feast.

The Christian Endeavor Society of St. George's P. M. church held an enjoyable social Saturday evening in the church vestry, the evening being given over almost entirely to social games. Rev. Alfred Humphries, pastor of the church, opened the affair with a short address, after which the young people joined in playing various games and later partook of dainty refreshments served by the committee. The pleasant affair was in charge of the social committee of the organization, including Miss Mabel Adams, chairman; Miss Edith Adams, Kenneth Haycock and Roy Chamberlain.

Obituary

MISS KATE M. POOR

Many people of Andover were surprised and grieved to learn of the death of Miss Kate M. Poor, which occurred at the home of her sister, Mrs. Jefferson Cole in Peabody, October 5, after a brief illness. Until six years ago she lived in Andover, in the cottage on Poor street removed five years ago to make room for the house now occupied by Orval Reddig on the Wood estate. Here she and all of the seven children of her parents, Jonathan and Catherine Poor, were born. Her father was connected with the wheelwright firm of William Poor and Company, which for many years did a flourishing business in the shops (now removed) located at the corner of Main and Poor streets.

After his death in 1880, Miss Poor and her mother lived alone in the old home, happy in each others companionship, and blessing others with their deeds of kindness and neighborly cheer. The mother died six years ago, since which time Miss Kate has lived in Peabody with her sister, Mrs. Annie Poor Cole, who is the only surviving member of the family.

Miss Poor's life was quiet, gentle, unostentatious and kindly, devoted to her friends and her church. For forty-two years she was a loyal member of the Free church. She was rich in possessing the "greatest thing in the world"—that spirit of love which "suffereth long and is kind", which envieth not, which "seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil—which rejoiceth not in unrighteousness but rejoiceth with the truth."

A brief funeral service was held at the home of Mrs. Cole in Peabody on Friday noon, and the body was brought to the family lot in Ridgewood cemetery, North Andover, where a brief service was conducted by her Free church pastor, Rev. F. A. Wilson.

Abbot Academy Notes

Three appointments of lecturers in the near future at Abbot Academy should be of interest to people in the town. Miss Bailey is especially glad to be able to announce a lecture on Monday evening, October 25, by Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey. Dr. Bailey, who was until recently Dean of the State Agricultural College of Cornell University, is a foremost authority in this country on agriculture and horticulture, and is a leader in the work of agricultural education and the community-life movement. He was chairman of the Country Life Commission in the Roosevelt administration.

On November 19, there will be a reading of fairy tales by Miss Marie Shedlock, an Englishwoman of notable distinction, who is well known for the remarkable success of her classes in story-telling for librarians and teachers.

Early in December there will be a lecture in French on Joan of Arc by Mme. Guerin, who gave such a delightful impersonation of Marie Antoinette last winter at the school.

Nailing the Lies That Kill Reputations

Editor of Townsman—

"Somebody told me" and "They say". These two have been the starting-points of the ruin of the reputation of a many a man and woman. Somebody told me soon after the nomination of the Hon. Samuel W. McCall for governor, that Mrs. McCall was a Catholic and that Mr. McCall, if elected, would become a tool of that church and would be influenced in a greater or lesser degree by his wife in making appointments favorable to Catholics. Sam McCall does not look as though he would be the tool of anyone, but the story was passed along and grew as it passed. Inquiries from those who know nail the lie, for Mrs. McCall is a descendant of the Pilgrims and a member of the Mayflower Association. Both Mr. and Mrs. McCall are active workers in the Episcopal church of their home town, Winchester. Somebody who told me, will have to find some other way of spoiling Mr. McCall's chance of election.

"They say Sam Johnson is a K. of C." Samuel Johnson is the present Essex County sheriff, but a candidate for a county office, who lives not many miles from our square, is assiduously circulating the above story, in the hope of influencing the voters opposed to the K. of C. Sheriff Johnson, unfortunately for the order, does not possess the necessary qualifications for election to the K. of C. He has been an officer and member of the First Corps of Cadets of Salem, one of the most exclusive military companies in the state. Early investigation nailed this lie.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" was the answer of the first murderer. He took a life, but the man who takes away another man's reputation by lying, is just as much a murderer, and those who circulate the story are equally guilty. Get the facts in the case as I did.

What Women's Suffrage Has Accomplished in California

To the Editor of the Townsman:

Sir: Any voter who desires to appeal from the claims of politicians and paid workers to a disinterested account of what is actually happening in California, cannot do better than to obtain a copy of the September issue of the quarterly journal of the American Social Hygiene Association and read its study of the morals of San Francisco and the Exposition. (6 Hancock Avenue, next the State House grounds, is the office of the Massachusetts branch.)

The report can hardly be quoted in Andover—it would make Denver or Chicago blush. But in fine its sets forth, in the chief city of California, after four years of Votes for Women, a moral condition that is hardly believable for any civilized community. As the "Congregationalist" put it in summarizing, in its issue for September 23, this and two other reports on the same topic, San Francisco is now "an open town, with apparently no pretense to suppress commercialized vice or to enforce the laws against it." It is the same story here as other double-suffrage states: The women have secured reams of laws—to which nobody is paying the least attention.

And this is the method by which is now proposed to "reform" Massachusetts.

E. T. BREWSTER.

Editor of Andover Townsman.

Dear Sir:—Judging from your Editorials, the regular Republican nominee for Representative does not seem to meet with the full approval of your esteemed Republican newspaper, and apparently you see no way at present of gracefully accepting the situation as it stands and endorsing Mr. Gleason as the regular candidate.

In this good old New England town where your forebears and mine have lived for many generations, and where we all love our neighbors at heart, although we talk spitefully about them, let us, and "all good men come to the aid of the party". Let us forget the little difficulties of the past and come out open-hearted and unashamed and put Mr. Gleason in the State House.

We take a chance, no matter whom we elect, and I am one of many who will take a chance on Mr. Gleason.

Yours sincerely,
HORACE HALE SMITH.

To the Editor of the Townsman,

Dear Sir:—A few weeks ago you mentioned at my request that there was need of baby carriages at Lawrence City Mission. Since then one carriage has been sent to our rooms and another has been promised. At the present time our Babies' Nurse is supervising the care of 145 babies. We need still more carriages. We also want a wheel-chair for an adult paralytic.

Yours with gratitude,
CLARK CARTER,
City Missionary.

A City Built for Motion Pictures

A few years ago a little man with a large head, a big heart, and a wide smile day-dreamed. He saw in a vision a beautiful city of strangely fanciful architecture, whose varied nature would give one the impression that every part of the world had contributed something of its own. Here in vistas visionary the little man saw a university of men, scenes, and homes.

The little man was Carl Laemmle. His dream never left him through years of rubbing the Aladdin's lamp of hard work. The genie has now delivered the substance of that dream. It is called Universal City—a garden spot eight miles from Los Angeles, California—and cost the Universal Film Manufacturing Company the ransom price of many kings. It is a monument to the faith of Carl Laemmle—faith which, aided by dollars, has removed mountains of doubt and pessimism as to the future of the motion-picture industry.

Back in the West, where Laemmle first had his dream, the indulgent friends who called him a lovable crank, and who put him in the class of enthusiasts who live and die thinking about perpetual motion and the fourth dimension, have changed their opinions. And these indulgent friends still have the same few hundreds of dollars tied up in the old stock, which money Laemmle tried to induce them to invest with him when the dawn of the moving-picture boom broke the night of his obscurity.

The genie of the lamp was drowsy, and it took time and energy to make him execute the letter of the dream. Laemmle began modestly—as modestly as he talks. He organized the Universal Film Manufacturing Company. The moving-picture mania swept the world, and opportunity loomed large. The weaker companies staggered and dropped under loads of mismanagement and faulty diagnosis of public taste. The Universal with Laemmle moved on.

It was not much more than a year ago that the Universal built the largest and most up-to-date studio in the world at Hollywood, California. It had a capacity of twenty-five thousand feet of finished film a day. But this wasn't the city of which Laemmle had dreamed. The genie had erred. Laemmle journeyed from New York to Hollywood. It was fine, superb, but not the city of his long-cherished vision. "It will do for a year—until we can build the real Universal City," he said to a disappointed crowd of men who felt justified in believing that they had built something which merited longer than a year of life. "The real Universal City will turn out ten miles of drama—comedy and tragedy—every week." And so it has come to pass.

In this city of the cinema the Occident and the Orient, longitude and latitude meet. It is the biggest city of make-believe in the universe. Kipling said that "East is East and West is West," but here they are neighbors. Hindu streets and Afghan villages overlap on Western cattle-ranches. A teacher might readily say, "Go to Universal City and see the world." But visitors would never see the same city twice. It is chameleon—as changeable as a woman. Within three days its architecture can be altered to conform to any nationality or climate. There is no building within its limits that could not be radically changed in appearance almost overnight.

Troy, Athens, Rome, Paris, London, and New York were or are all distinguished and characteristic cities. Troy is famed for its walls of defense, Athens for its sculpture and beautiful public places, Rome for its seven hills and public buildings, Paris for its Eiffel Tower and beautiful boulevards, London for its extent and diversity of architecture, New York principally for its sky-scrapers.

As regards the needs of motion-pictures, Universal City combines everything which could be found in any of these cities and could represent all of them within a week.

There is no utility shop put up for the use of workmen which could not be turned into a barracks for the quartering of soldiers, a hovel for the entertainment of thieves and desperadoes, or a ranch house for use in Western drama. The Administration Building itself is built with a different face on every quarter.

The streams and gullies which run through the cities are constructed so that they may be diversified to suit the needs of the scenario. They can become part of a scene representing a Japanese arch bridge, a pontoon, a Roman stone-paved bridge, a steel cantilever or American trestle, an English causeway, or a Venetian bridge.

In walking around one of the buildings, from the architecture on one side a visitor can imagine that he is in Spain. Going to the other side, he would find himself fancifully in a German village. Battle-scarred fields, Indian villages, and metropolitan streets run in continuous intimacy. The furland inhabitants of Greenland hob-nob with the semi-naked savages of the South Sea Isles, like washerwomen over the back fence. It conjures Topsy-Turvy Land.

Simultaneous with the building of the Western Wonder City, Laemmle had his heart and his head in another operation—the erection of the largest motion-picture studio in the East, at Coytesville, New Jersey, just across the ferry from New York City. Here, when it is finished, will work the Atlantic companies of the Universal, who are now housed mainly on Manhattan Isle itself.

The Imp Company, Laemmle's first producing enterprise, and the Victor Company have their working quarters here, under the able and shrewd guidance of Julius Stern, who is young enough to worry about it, and sufficiently old above the shoulders to do the thinking required of him. Here is an
